HELD "IDEAL SOLDIER"

MAJ. POWELL CLAYTON.

luty at the War Department, and reently assigned to the 16th Cavalry, on Mexican border, died today at Fort for the necessary grading work, in the Sam Houston, Tex., from injuries to his amount of $28,410. head received in a fall two weeks ago. while schooling his horse over the hurdles on the drill field.

The news of the sudden death came to Washington today in a telegram from Col. William S. Scott, commanding the 16th Cavalry, which gave the information that the injuries received necessitate the building of a concrete viaduct, plans for which are now being made by the office of the engineer of bridges of the District.

This is the only part of the general improvement that is not under contract, as a arrangements already have been made for macadamizing the thoroughfare upon the completion of the grading.

In connection with the improvement orders have been issued for the laying of street between Military road and Luzon avenue. This will cost $9,340. Orders also have been issued for the installation of 380 feet of sewer in the east and west sides of 16th street and crossing 16th street at Concord avenue, at an estimated cost of $1,120. of duty.

Maj. Clayton served on the general staff in this city from March, 1913, until July, 1916. Previously he had been military attache to the United States embassy in Mexico. His father, Senator Powell Clayton, who died in Washington in July, 1915, had a notable career as a brigadier general during the civil war, as Governor of Arkansas, as United States senator from Arkansas and as minister to Mexico.

of the general staff who said of him:

"I regarded Maj, Clayton as the ideal soldier. He represented in himself, in defined and concrete form, the definite cardinal virtues that are associated with military ideals. Honest, loyal, devoted to his profession, he epitomized what the American officer and gentleman should be. His death will be a source of loss—not only a personal loss to those who knew him, but a loss to the profession of arms."

Maj. Clayton was regarded in social circles, both here at the National Capital and at other centers, no less highly than in the realm of military affairs. He was a member of both the Army and Navy and Metropolitan Clubs of this city.

Wife Was Miss Langhorne.

Miss Nannie Tayloe Langhorne, daugher of the late John L. Langhorne of Lynchburg, Va. Her brother, Col.

George Langhorne, is on the border.

Maj. Clayton's mother, Mrs. Powel Clayton, who resides at the Highlands, will be brought to the Clayton home, 1210 18th street northwest, preparatory to burial at Arlington.
